"Excuse me, Mr. Ice Cream Cone," said Alana. "Can I interview you?"

"Sure," said the ice cream cone. "I'd be happy to answer your questions."

"What's your name?" asked Alana.

"My name is Scoopy," said the ice cream cone. "I'm a very special ice cream cone. I can talk, and I can make myself do all sorts of funny things."

"That's amazing!" said Alana. "Can you show me some of your funny tricks?"

"Sure," said Scoopy. "Watch this."

Scoopy started to dance and sing. He did a silly little dance and sang a funny song. Alana laughed and laughed.

"That was so funny!" said Alana. "I've never seen an ice cream cone do that before."

"I'm glad you enjoyed it," said Scoopy. "I love to make people laugh."

"Can you tell me a joke?" asked Alana.

"Sure," said Scoopy. "What do you call an ice cream cone with no arms or legs?"

"I don't know," said Alana.

"A shake!" said Scoopy.

Alana laughed again. "That was a good joke," she said. "I'm really enjoying talking to you, Scoopy."

"I'm enjoying talking to you too, Alana," said Scoopy. "You're a very nice girl."

Alana and Scoopy talked for a long time. They talked about all sorts of things, including their favorite foods, their favorite games, and their favorite people. Alana had such a good time talking to Scoopy that she didn't want to leave.

"I have to go now," said Alana. "But I'm so glad I met you, Scoopy. You're the funniest ice cream cone I've ever met."

"I'm glad I met you too, Alana," said Scoopy. "Come back and visit me again sometime."

Alana waved goodbye to Scoopy and walked away. She couldn't wait to tell her friends about the funny, wacky ice cream cone she had interviewed.
