By Bernard Lewis

Renowned historian Bernard Lewis offers a radical reassessment of the Middle East, arguing that the region has entered a new era marked by the end of modern history. Lewis argues that the Middle East is no longer a part of the modern world, and that it is now in a state of decline and disintegration.

Lewis's argument is based on a number of factors, including the rise of Islamic fundamentalism, the decline of the nation-state, and the increasing fragmentation of the region. He argues that these factors have combined to create a situation in which the Middle East is no longer able to progress or to participate in the modern world.

Lewis's book is a provocative and challenging look at the Middle East. It is a must-read for anyone who wants to understand the region and its future.
